

Gines Recognized at Techweek KC 100

by: Victoria Rosengarten, Contributing Writer

October 03, 2018

Dell Gines, of the Bank's Community Development team, was listed as an "Ambassador," on the 2018 list.

---

Techweek Kansas City released its Techweek 100 list of the premier leaders pushing innovation in Kansas City. The collection of cultivators, ambassadors and innovators is a who's who of familiar names across the startup, entrepreneurship and tech communities. Dell Gines, of the Bank's Community Development team, was listed as an "Ambassador," on the 2018 list. Techweek staff shared, "it's a celebration of fast-growing companies, prominent investors, key enablers of the digital ecosystem, creators of new technologies, and other innovators that make important contributions to their field." The announcement was published last week via Startland News. As one of the 25 named Ambassadors, Techweek officials felt Gines and others in this category are founders, influencers, and prominent voices who act as positive representatives for the tech community. Recently, Dell interviewed with Startland News and shared his black women business startup research. Techweek 100 honorees have displayed the following characteristics, according to the selection committee for the list: originality, prominence, growth, gumption, and pertinence. The annual Techweek Kansas City event series is set to return Oct. 8-12 with national tech, venture capital, nonprofit and blockchain leaders among the speaker lineup. Gines will participate in Techweek's Oct. 10 programming dedicated to diversity and inclusion.

---

Media

Dell Gines was recognized during Techweek.