

Nicholas Economides

Professor,

New York University

Mr. Economides is a professor of economics at the Stern School of Business at New York University and the executive director of the Networks, Electronic Commerce, and Telecommunications Institute. His fields of specialization include economics of networks and technical compatibility and standardization, as well as structure and organization of financial markets and payments systems. Previously, he taught at Columbia University and Stanford University. He is an adviser to the U.S. Federal Trade Commission; the Greece, Ireland, New Zealand, and Portugal governments; major telecommunications corporations; a number of Federal Reserve Banks; and the Bank of Greece. He serves on the Economist Intelligence Unit Advisory Board and is editor of numerous publications, including The Quarterly Journal of Electronic Commerce and The Journal of Network Industries.